FILM FESTIVAL

Films for all of us
To bring out the best in us

May 30 - June 3, 2018 | SEDONA, AZ

Welcome

Letter from the Executive Director

Dear ILLUMINATES,

As I look at the chaos in the world, I often wonder why we must go through such challenging times. When the darkness descends, how do we make sense of the anguish, both individual and global?

This year's films offer us an ocean of light. They guide us to answers and upliftment. We become the characters. Through their trials, we're inspired to look inward. If we're lucky and brave enough, we sort through the layers of fear, judgment, anger. We uncover that which is immovable, unaffected, and undeniably good—our illuminated souls. Our core of love, truth and beauty shines.

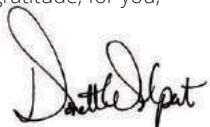

Whether we find that light in a fleeting moment, a daily practice, or on the world's stage in service, we become blessed to truly know ourselves. We can then also see past the layers of fear and judgment in others to see their goodness. With our own "enoughness," we no longer need to find shortcomings in others. This is where the "outer" change begins.

Every year, we see themes emerge in the film lineup that represent our global collective consciousness. This year, the festival films highlight the hero's inner journey. They show us how, as we reach inward, we can ultimately build radically fulfilled, joyful, purpose-driven lives.

I am so excited to share our festival's evolution. Please join me in honoring our keynote heroes and next generation of thought leaders: Lynne Twist, Tom Chi, Mooji, Stephen Simon, Hal Elrod, and Michael Franti. New this year, we will award a $5,000 cash prize to the most life-changing, story-strong nonfiction film. Also, watch our cutting-edge Reel Healing program go online this year, so you can revel in transformation long after the festival wraps.

I invite you to sit back, enjoy, and expand. Then go be a hero—in your own life and in the world.

In gratitude, for you,

SOUTHWEST PREMIERE

Directors: Grant Korgan and Brian Niles

Co-Director: Geoff Callan

Documentary Feature

USA • 2018 • 89 minutes

What do you do when your high-risk, high-adventure world crashes under you? If you're Grant Korgan, you focus on 120 percent recovery to do the impossible: push your way over nearly 100 miles in Antarctica, spinal cord injury and all. After losing all sensation from the waist down in a snowmobiling accident, this charismatic athlete went on to champion "right attitude" in the face of adversity. His philosophy: "Owning your reality is when the journey begins." Along the way, he shares the power of positivity, how to achieve goals regardless of the circumstance, and "the importance of remembering that life is happening right now, in this moment, with or without our permission." Hurling off cliffs and flying over powder, we learn, is not just a thing for snowmobiles or skis. Watch an inevitable fall—and an incredible comeback, relayed through stunning visuals and an inspiring, one-of-a-kind story.

Q&A with director Grant Korgan, and producers Geoff Callan, Jeff Allard, and Shawna Korgan follows.

Natural Action Technologies
Structured Water

Join The Water Evolution

Our devices are designed to emulate Nature through motion and materials. Water Vortices have long been known as water's way of self-cleaning and energizing itself and the environment. Natural Action utilizes a specific flow form geometry to establish a balanced vortex motion within the water. By its unique and innovative design, a special dual or double helix vortex is induced into the water. This basic function is achieved seamlessly through the special flow form and is the reason that rivers and streams in nature always alternate between left and right turns.

We have easy to use devices which deliver water in a more natural and biologically friendly form. Once an esoteric and elusive mystery, Structured Water is now understood on a basic level and is of great interest to consumers, industries, and universities throughout the world.

THE WAY HOME & LIVESTREAM SATSANG WITH MOOJI

WORLD PREMIERE

Director: Jeremy Lubman
Documentary Feature
USA • 2017 • 70 minutes

Sunday, June 3, 10:00–11:50am
Mary D. Fisher Theatre

Mooji's comments and very presence in this documentary brings Satsang to viewers, like the falling snow, calling all of us home to that quiet place inside where our thoughts rest and true knowing can rise. This film is drawn over 5 weeks of Satsang held in Rishikesh and Vashista Cave along the Holy Ganga River. With the gravity of the true modern master that he is, Moojibaba remains in the witness state of Satsang while responding and commenting.

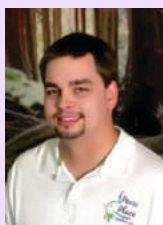

Q&A with Jeremy Lubman follows.

REEL HEALING

Calling All Earthlings on Waves of Sound

The Integratron's arcing wooden chamber of resonance is still sought and used by sound healers and visionaries worldwide in their work connecting the human spirit to the cosmos. In the end, Van Tassel's life raft for humanity is a reminder that there is a road map back into the higher realms through resonance. Peace Place's Arthur Baird is Sedona's maestro for sourcing that still point within, in the cascading waves of sound created with loving intention from his noted crystal bowls.

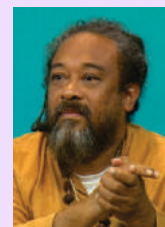

REEL HEALING

LiveStream Satsang with Mooji

Mooji will be telecast LIVE in Satsang directly following the film, where he will share comments and answer audience questions. These interactions are intended to introduce the direct path to freedom through self-inquiry known as The Invitation. Mooji is a true light in this world, whose presence, wisdom and loving guidance points us to who we are beyond the limitations of our conditioning and identity. It is a first for ILLUMINATE to host this enlightened Master.
